

DELEAGTES RUSH FOR HOME AFTER SELECTING CURTIS

Republican Convention Scatters Quickly Following Landslide to Kansan

KANSAS CITY TIRED OUT

Hotels Are Deserted and City Is As Tired As Its Visitors

KANSAS CITY, June 16.—The Republican Convention is over for everybody but the street sweepers.

The delegates, who for four days tried with varying success to find their way home after nominating Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis for President and Vice President. The Kansas Senator was nominated on the first ballot at the brief final session yesterday afternoon. The vote was 1,052 to 34. This was later made unanimous as a roaring welcome went up for the majority Senate floor leader.

Kansas City to which conventions are no novelty is returning rapidly to its usual everyday tasks and watching the street cleaners sweep up the few evidences left of the great political gathering. The shouting is ended, but the arm bands, hat bands, and brass bands, candidates' photographs and recommendations linger until the white wings can do something about it. Plain and fancy sweeping is going on apace and nightfall will find the convention city quite itself again.

Before the first home-going delegates were on their way the huge convention hall changed its dress. Out came the G. O. P. emblems, the elaborate decorations and the stands in which the 54 standards of the States, territories and District of Columbia rested when they were not being lugged about the track by frenzied delegates cheering a candidate. When the Baptist Convention meets next month in Convention Hall there will be nothing to indicate that candidates for president and vice president were named on two ballots in this spacious meeting place.

As the Republican host winded its way homeward, the bottom dropped out of the market for plaster elephants, G. O. P. monograms, combination rattles and bells and balloons. The noise-making devices and balloons and canes, knowing no political allegiance, were packed for shipment to Houston, to be coupled in the betting on the stands of the street fakirs with the Democratic donkey replacing the Republican pachyderm.

Before the echo of the final, "the ayes have it," from the lips of Chairman George H. Moses died away there was a wild scurrying of men and women with trains to catch. Many of the uninitiated were thrown for a loss by the dial system in vogue in the Kansas City Telephone System.

WRITES CLASS SONG

Miss Winifred Tracy, member of the 1928 graduating class at the Bristol High School, composed and put to music the class song. Miss Tracy has taken an active part in school affairs and has been a very conspicuous figure in school plays.

Miss Tracy's composition is as follows:

CLASS SONG

Our school days that we cherished now are past and gone,
And yet we like to linger here,
For each sweet joy that we have known,
We find it hard to part from comrades dear.

And now the wide, wide world before us brightly lies,
And yet it's here, fond memories love to dwell.
So "28" with sadden'd hearts are gathered here,
To bid Teachers, Comrades all a fond farewell.

Chorus:

Fellow class-mates, though we are leaving,
We will always think of you;
Though we may not even see you,
Yet our hearts will still be true.
We have always been friends together,
In sunshine and in the rain,
And now the memories of our friendship
Will everlastingly remain.

The day couldn't have been more glorious than it was when they started out. The sun was shining brightly and the brisk morning air made it all the more ideal for a hike of this kind.

The hike terminated at Rogers Woods where breakfast was cooked over fires built by the girls. And they all ate ravenously.

FIELD CLUB INCREASES ITS LEAD; BEATS LEEDOM'S

Carpet Makers Are Unable To Solve "Bill" Fine's Ball

FINAL SCORE — 12 TO 1

By T. M. Juno

Field Club increased its lead in the Bristol Twilight League by winning a one-sided battle from the Leedom's nine by the score of 12 to 1.

"Bill" Fine served them from the firing line for Field Club nine and had the carpet-makers without a single until the sixth inning. Fine, who pitches to the Athletics in batting practice during their home stay, was very close to duplicating his feat of two years ago. While pitching for the champion Third Ward team, Fine set down A. O. H. without a run or a hit and only one man reached first base. In last night's game, Callahan hit a roller between first and second which both Cochrane and Beaton went after. Beaton stopped the ball but no one was there to cover first, so the batter was credited with a hit. In the seventh Mangan was credited for a single on a hit to right.

On the other hand, Field Club socked Whitaker for sixteen hits and crossed the plate twelve times.

The game marked the debut of several players. Cliff Beaton, of the Field Club, made his debut with a wonderful catch of a short fly and collected three solid swats. Sutton played his first game at shortstop for Leedom's and did well, handling five chances perfectly. Dugan pitched to the last two batters for the carpetmakers in the final innings and showed great promise. Dugan has been on the side lines with a broken arm. Gregg Hibbs, of Rutgers University, made his debut and played wonderful ball.

Leedom's were set down in order in the opening canto. H. Cochrane went out, Beaton to M. Cochrane. Callahan struck out. Riola hit to Fine and went out.

Field Club scored two in their opener. Chester Beaton doubled. Dugan also got a double, scoring Beaton. M. Cochrane hit to Whitaker and went out. L. Hibbs flied to Callahan. G. Hibbs was safe when Callahan muffed his fly, but when Hibbs tried to make second he went out, Callahan to H. Cochrane. Dugan scored on the play.

Fine made quick work on Leedom's in the second. White struck out. Mangan hit to M. Cochrane and went out. Brushia hit to short and was thrown out at first.

Whitaker wasn't so bad in the second. Fine got a two-base hit to right.

HOOPER: THE NEXT PRESIDENT

In nominating Herbert Hoover for president the Republican party has endorsed the Coolidge administration and its policies, achieved that which had long seemed inevitable, picked a man preeminently fitted for the highest office in the land and found a man with an unblemished record both in private and public life.

America has produced few Herbert Hoovers. He is a statesman, not a politician. He is a public servant, not an office-seeker. He is a Republican, yet was indispensable to a decidedly Democratic administration. And more than a decade in Washington has left no blot on his escutcheon.

The name of Herbert Hoover is synonymous with business efficiency and good government. There is a reason why the nation instinctively turns to this business genius in such emergencies as a world food shortage, a war-ridden continent overflowing with starving widows and orphans, and a Mississippi flood.

Men and women who accomplish great things in this life always make enemies. Secretary Hoover has made enemies, but considering his achievements his critics are surprisingly few in number. His was always the "dirty work" to do. In a decade he has weathered several jobs that would have spelled political suicide for a man of average powers.

Were Herbert Hoover never to reach the white house his place in American history would be as permanently established as some presidents. History will number him among the few great cabinet members. The nation is indeed fortunate that this man will be its next president.

SUPER-INITIATION

Americans have been criticized from within and without for the installment plan of buying. An initial payment will get almost anything from lingerie to a limousine, and the installment business runs into the billions each year.

The British are chronic kickers in the direction of Uncle Sam but they are now eating any and all words ever uttered by them to the effect that deferred payments were rushing the United States on to economic suicide.

After exhausting every means known to them to improve business, manufacturers and merchants in England turned to the greatly condemned American plan. To their surprise it proved successful, so successful that the British volume of installment business is equal to that of the United States.

Not only have the British imitated the American system but they have carried it a step farther than it has ever been developed on this side of the Atlantic. It remained for them to introduce the installment system in the purchase of theater tickets.

The psychology which prompts this offer is not quite clear. Here there is the lure of wearing or using while paying. But in the London theater selling seats for so much down and so much a week the box office keeps the ticket until the final payment has been made. If the purpose is to induce people to board their movie pennies for a seat in the legitimate theater, the plan will never work on Broadway. At the present prices of seats for Broadway hits most shows would close before the theatergoer had made the final payment on his ticket.

REPUBLICANS ADOPT PLATFORM FOR PARTY

Convention at Kansas City Endorses Administration of Calvin Coolidge

PROMISES TAX CUT

By Kenneth Clark

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

KANSAS CITY, June 16.—Into a Republican Convention snarling over the farm issue, the resolutions committee yesterday dropped the Hoover-dictated platform which rejects the corn belt's plan for agricultural relief.

By inference the platform upheld President Coolidge's veto of the McNary-Haugen relief bill, and offered the farmers as a substitute the Jardine Administration plan for Federal aid to cooperative marketing. Further relief was promised in "adequate tariff protection for agricultural products."

The platform, on which the party will make its bid before the country for continuance in power, was adopted by the resolutions committee only after a 40-hour fight waged against the farm plank by the anti-administration anti-Hoover forces.

For the first time since prohibition became effective, the platform contained a specific reference to the 18th Amendment by pledging the party and its nominees to the "observance and vigorous enforcement of this provision."

The farm and prohibition planks were the heart of the platform of nearly sixty typewritten pages. There were 36 planks in all.

The platform extolled President Coolidge as perhaps no other Republican president has been praised since Lincoln.

It promised further tax reduction and lauded the financial accomplishments of the administration, particularly economy and debt reduction.

It urged upward tariff revision to meet world competition.

It opposed debt cancellation. It endorsed Secretary of State Kellogg's multilateral treaty to outlaw war.

It pledged regular publicity of campaign funds as a means to curb excessive expenditures in elections.

It promised adequate relief for disabled veterans.

It denounced dishonesty in government and deplored the fact that certain citizens of both parties have trafficked in national interests for private gain.

It promised to round out the navy to the 5-5-3 ratio of the Washington Conference.

It urged greater participation by women in politics.

It renewed the recommendation for enactment of anti-lynching legislation. It criticized the abuse "in some instances" of injunctions in labor disputes.

It opposed joining the League of Nations.

The farm plank, which Senator Borah of Idaho characterized as offering the farmers no more in the way of relief than the 1924 platform, caused a group of 15 Southern and Western members of the committee to submit a minority report embracing the principles of the equalization fee in the McNary-Haugen bill, Earl C. Smith of Illinois, a Lowden man, led the dissenters.

This is the 1928 model of farm relief offered in the national platform:

"We promise every assistance in the reorganization of the marketing system on sounder and more economical lines and, where diversification is needed, government financial assistance during the period of transition.

"The Republican party pledges itself to the enactment of legislation creating a Federal Farm Board clothed with the necessary powers to promote the establishment of a farm marketing system of farmer owned and controlled stabilization corporations or associations to prevent and control surpluses through orderly distribution.

"We favor adequate tariff protection.

"We favor, without putting the government into business, the establishment of a Federal system of organization for cooperative and orderly marketing of farm products.

SYNOPSIS

As a white boss of Frisco, Buckwell seeks to secure valuable ancestral Vasquez property. His lawyer's nephew, Terry, loves Dolores Vasquez and exposes Buckwell's perfidy. Buckwell attempts to seek their love affair. Vasquez dies of stroke when Buckwell rudely confronts him. Dolores and Terry expose Buckwell as Chinaman in effort to avenge Vasquez's death. Buckwell kidnaps them and threatens Terry with torture unless Dolores denies Chinese accusations. She appears before large body of men and lies about Buckwell to save Terry. Buckwell triumphant.

Before Lu Feng could reply the white bosses returned Buckwell's smile with relief and nods of approval. As they crowded around to extend congratulations on his vindication Buckwell swaggered forward and offered his hand.

The long men stared into space or whispered to each other. They were unable to believe their ears.

Lu Feng approached Dolores with a deadly, threatening look in his eyes. But she had even forgotten that he was in the room. As soon as Buckwell left the light but, ten to reveal in the plaudits of his associates Dolores swiftly protected the fatal switch with her own hand and electrified every man in the room by crying out:

"Hold Senor Buckwell! He is a Chinaman!"

Buckwell whirled with both arms outstretched and, pushing aside the men who surrounded him, made for Dolores.

"Hold Senor Buckwell! He is a Chinaman!"

"Don't let him touch me!" she warned in terror, her hand covering the switch protectively.

Buckwell was seized by strong hands on all sides. His struggles were futile, yet he retained a fine air of injured dignity. "The girl is demented. Let me have her taken to her room," he said.

But for once no one believed Chris Buckwell. He found that his political contemporaries were holding him prisoner in his own home.

"That is not true. I am perfectly sane!" defended Dolores, her eyes shining and her cheeks red with excitement. "He made me lie to you. He said that if I told the truth again he would press this light switch"—she pointed to it as if it were a poisonous scorpion—"which would be the signal for Terry O'Shaughnessy's death." Her eyes sought Brandon, and she continued, "Terry is bound and gagged down stairs in a torture chamber."

Every white and yellow man in the room knew that Dolores had told the truth. Buckwell glared at her with murder in his eyes, but was prevented from reaching her, or the switch, by the restraining hands of the men who had him safely pinioned in a big chair.

Every Chinaman smiled broadly in unrestrained satisfaction, disclosing shiny white teeth. Lu Feng's very expression asked Dolores' pardon for having doubted her. But of all those present Brandon was the most violently affected.

"You — dam scoundrel, where is that boy of mine?" he demanded.

It is a strange trait of human nature to protect one's kin in dire extremity, no matter how indifferent one may have been to them when things were running along smoothly. Brandon was not an exception to the rule.

Buckwell calmly returned Brandon's glare. "Find him!" he hissed in a challenge.

A dead silence followed the announcement.

"He is in a secret room," Dolores hastened to explain. "I was blindfolded when they took me there, and I could see beneath the bandage—there is a secret door in here."

Her voice trailed back to the men in the living room, for she had thrown open the hall doors and was on her way to that room at the end of the hall where San Toy had delivered her to Jimmey and the Texas Kid.

The long leaders followed close behind. They wanted all the evidence of Buckwell's perfidy that could be secured and surmised that a secret room would be an excellent place to gather evidence against him.

For the first time during the interview, Buckwell lost his self-possession. He cursed Dolores with a vehemence that was worse than anything the white bosses had ever heard, and even they were not unskilled in an irreverent use of English. Overpowered by the combined strength of his captors, Buckwell was unable to resist. With a poor grace he suffered himself to be conducted to one of the two secret entrances that lead to his shrine room. It was well for the future of Jimmey and the Texas Kid that Buckwell was not able to lay his hands on them for their negligence in permitting Dolores to gain a knowledge of her surroundings.

"Here it is!" she cried happily when her hands found the same spring in the woodwork that Jimmey had pressed to open the hidden entrance.

A dark foreboding interior opened up before the astonished men gathered behind Dolores. Put without hesitancy she led them down the mysterious stairway and called out a warning when they reached the great iron door that blocked their progress. The fifty foot passage, was dotted with men who still held Buckwell prisoner.

Dolores' small white hands fluttered searchingly over the surface and lingered around the heavy hinges.

"I can't open it," she cried in alarm. "I can't find the spring."

Many other hands, both yellow and white, came to her assistance and exploringly covered every inch of the door's surface, searching for the secret spring that would give them entrance. They could not locate it.

"The men who brought me down touched something on this side—about here," explained Dolores as she reached up and pressed against the big metal hinge.

Immediately more matches flared in the darkness, but eager fingers searched in vain.

"How do you open this fool door?" demanded Brandon of Buckwell.

The designer of the secret contrivance shrugged. He was enjoying a growing sense of security. He was confident that Dolores and the men would never discover the opening spring. The door above closed automatically and was locked behind them. They were prisoners in the passageway. He would never lead them to the surface again until he had their written assurance that they would not proceed any further against him.

The surmise of Dolores was in itself insufficient proof to convict him, but if they once reached the shrine room there would be ample evidence. As the minutes passed and the door still defied their efforts Buckwell became more confident and self-assured.

"I regret that my guests must be so crowded," he commented with sneering politeness. "But remember, you are here from your own choice, and right here you will all stay until I have your promise that the matter we recently discussed upstairs shall be forgotten."

It quickly dawned on the waiting group in the secret passage that they had placed themselves again in Buckwell's power. Their anxiety to reach Terry had been the reason, and now they were separated from him, they were sure, only by the trick door which refused to open to their many attempts.

"They opened it right here. I know they did," insisted Dolores working untiringly to locate the hidden spring.

The flickering light of the matches revealed many tense faces, but it was the tenseness of anxiety rather than fear. Anxiety for Terry. Buckwell's face beamed with silent enjoyment. He was pleased that his accusers had played so conveniently into his hand.

"Something clicked!" cried Dolores.

They stood silent while the heavy door mysteriously opened. Buckwell cursed and frantically attempted to break away, but his captors cursed back at him jeering with scorn as his face suddenly turned pallid from fear.

The handsomely appointed shrine room was revealed to their curious eyes. The secret of Buckwell was a secret no longer.

San Toy sprang up in alarm from her watchful position in front of Terry and the signal light that meant his death. She stood with upraised dagger, ready to thrust the weapon into the body of the first man who approached her prisoner.

a multilateral treaty proposed to the principal powers of the world and open to the signature of all nations, to renounce war as an instrument of national policy and declaring in favor of Pacific settlement of international disputes, the first step outlawing war.

"The Republican party will continue to support American rights in Mexico, as elsewhere in the world, and at the same time to promote and strengthen friendship and confidence.

"The marines, now in Nicaragua, are there to protect American lives and property and to aid in carrying out an agreement whereby we have undertaken to do what we can to restore and maintain order and to insure a fair and free election.

"The Republican party maintains the traditional American policy of non-interference in the political affairs of other nations. This government has definitely refused membership in the League of Nations and to assume any obligations under the covenant of the League.

"On this we stand." Mining—"The party is anxious, hopeful, and willing to assist in any feasible plan for the stabilization of the coal mining industry which will work with justice to the miners, consumers and producers."

Labor—"The party favors freedom in wage contracts, the right of collective bargaining by free and responsible agents of their own choosing, which develops and maintains that purposeful cooperation which gains its chief incentive through voluntary agreement."

Railroads—"We believe that the present laws under which our railroads are regulated are soundly based on correct principles, the spirit of which must always be preserved. Because, however, of changes in the public demands, trade conditions and of the character of the competition, which even the greatest railroads are now being called upon to meet, we feel that in the light of this new experience, possibly modification or amendments, the need of which is proved, should be considered.

Public utilities—"The protection of the public from exactions or burdens in rates for service by reason of monopoly control, and the protection of the smaller organizations from suppression in their own field, has been a fundamental idea in all regulatory enactments. While recognizing that times Federal regulations might be more effective than states in controlling intrastate utilities, the party favors and has sustained state regulation, believing that such responsibility in the end will create a force of state public opinion which will be more effective in preventing discrimination and injustices."

Honesty in government—"We stand for honesty in government, for the appointment of officials whose integrity cannot be questioned, we deplore the fact that any official has ever fallen from this high standard and that certain American citizens of both parties have so far forgotten their duty as citizens as to traffic in national interests for private gain.

We have prosecuted and shall always prosecute any official who subordinates his public duty to his personal interest."

Campaign expenditures—"Economy, honesty, and decency in the conduct of political campaigns are a necessity if representative government is to be preserved to the people and political parties are to hold the respect of the citizens at large.

"There will not be any relaxing of resolute endeavor to keep our elections clean, honest and free from taint of any kind. The improper use of money in governmental and political affairs is a great national evil. One of the most effective remedies for this abuse is publicity in all matters touching campaign contributions and expenditures. The Republican party, beginning not later than August 1, 1928, and every 30 days thereafter—the last publication being not later than five days before the election—will file with the committees of House and Senate a complete account of all contributions, the names of the contributors, the amount expended, and for what purposes, and will at all times hold its records and books touching such matters open for inspection.

"The party further pledges that it will not create, or permit to be created, any deficit which shall exist at the close of the campaign."
